A NATION'S FATE

Babylon asked the gods to give her glory and Babylon in a dream of glory went to her doom. Greece asked the pleasure and lost her manhood and honor in a merry round of pleasure. Rome asked for power and bargained away her soul in the market place for power.

America has been accused of asking for revenue, whether the accusation be true or not she is getting revenue. If she is getting it at the price of cheapened character and lowered ideals, at the price of American integrity, her fate will be the common fate of nations, unless she is called back to the faith of the fathers on which the corner stone of our nation was founded.

To succeed among men, women need not talk down the domestic and sentimental side of their lives.

If the saying be true that "a barking dog never bites" there is very little reason for anyone around town to fear death from a dog bite.

Meat at different meat markets usually sells for about the same price but it varies in quality according to grade of meat used and methods of handling. Wholesome meats are the product of quality stock cleanly handled and perfectly refrigerated. The modern sanitary market of Richards is supplying many housewives with this quality of meat, yet their prices are no higher than charged elsewhere for inferior quality. (Adv.)
